

Voices of San Anto

A SERIES OF BILINGUAL STORYTELLING WORKSHOPS

You have a story to tell, and we want to help you tell it!

Whether it's that funny anecdote you share at parties, an event that changed your life, or a family story passed down for generations, your story matters, and we want to help you bring it to life.

Join writer and performer Marisela Barrera for a free, two-session workshop at Pan American Branch Library where workshop participants will craft a 5-7 minute story about a significant moment in their life and present it at a live storytelling show.

This workshop is for adults 18+, and no writing or performance experience is required. Native Spanish speakers and bilingual folks are highly encouraged to register.

You will leave the workshop with:

- A fully-formed story ready for performance
- An understanding of story elements
- Performance strategies for effective live storytelling
- Experience sharing a story with friends, family, and the community

Marisela Barrera is a Tejana writer and teatrista who writes short stories and turns them into transmedia performances. She spins and eats fire with Jump-Start Performance Co., and teaches writing at Northwest Vista College.
